FOOD PROCESSING

“Hand hygiene is the critical touch point for safe, healthy food processing.”

Bacterial contamination can shut down a food processing operation. Employees who fail to wash their hands frequently can infect their fellow workers and contaminate your plant and products. In addition, dermatitis caused by frequent exposure to harsh conditions and irritating substances can discourage proper hand washing, lead to a greater number of colonizing germ species on the hands and cause discomfort that takes workers attention away from their jobs. Employees who suffer from job related skin ailments are less productive, more likely to call in sick and any treatment they receive can be claimed by Workers Compensation claims.

STOKO provides a total hand hygiene and health solution that prepares your employees to work in the food processing environment, keeps hands clean throughout their shifts and restores skin health when the workday is through. The comprehensive program is your best defence against dangerous cross – contamination, infectious disease and costly skin ailments.
